1 ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

Safety and Health Representative (SHR)

The SHR is responsible for carrying out the functions outlined in the Occupational Safety and Health Act WA 1984 (OSH Act).

These include

- Consulting, co-operating and communicating with employers and employees on safety and health matters.
- Inspecting the workplace for hazards at times outline by the employer.
- Reporting all hazards to the supervisor of the area.
- In consultation with supervisors, investigating any reported incident or hazard.
- Keeping informed about current safety and health issues, policies and procedures in the organisation and safety and health matters in general.
- Promoting safe work procedures and safety and health to co-workers.
- Participating in, and contributing to, safety and health training programs and initiatives.
- Attending relevant and approved training courses and refresher courses on safety and health.

Manager/Supervisor

The manager or supervisor of an SHR needs to comply with the requirements outlined in the OSH Act. These include

- Providing necessary information, relevant to the hazards in the workplace, to assist SHR in carrying out their functions.
- Consulting with the SHR on any proposed changes to the workplace which may be reasonably expected to affect the safety or health of workers before implementation.
- Giving the SHR paid time off from their normal duties to perform SHR functions.
- Giving the SHR paid time off to training as per the Occupational Safety and Health Regulations 1996.
- Notifying the SHR immediately after an accident or a dangerous occurrence.
- Allowing the SHR to be present at an interview/meeting with a worker on matters relating to OSH, if the worker requests this.
- Using the Work Performance and Planning Review process to ensure they have the required resources and time to adequately perform their functions.
